

Constructing a Policy Case

Policy case construction is a bit more complicated than the Fact and Value cases, simply because there needs to be a finding of a problem and a presentation of a plan to solve that problem.

Introduction

Ingratiation

Statement of Support of the Resolution (address the type of resolution)

Observation One: Definitions

Definition of key term #1

Definition of key term #2

Observation Two: Criteria

A. Our Criteria is “net benefits”

B. Decision Rule: If the plan solves the problem and the advantages are greater than the disadvantages, a Government ballot is warranted.

Significant Harm: The main argument that demonstrates a significant problem.

A. The first claim necessary to develop the story of the harm.

- 1. Supporting material (example, analogy, cause, sign, authority)*
- 2. Possible explanation of the relevance of the sub point to the case (if appropriate)*

B. The second claim necessary to develop the story of the harm.

- 1. Supporting material (example, analogy, cause, sign, authority)*
- 2. Possible explanation of the relevance of the sub point to the case (if appropriate)*

C. Additional points as needed.

D. Impact of the harm in the status quo.

Inherency: The point necessary to develop the inherent barrier. (what is stopping this problem from being fixed?)

Plan: Plan text: What does the plan exactly do?

- Plank One: Agency – Who enacts the plan? (Congress. State, Regulatory Agency, etc)
- Plank Two: Enforcement – Who makes sure plan is done? (Law enforcement, court, etc.)
- Plank Three: Funding – Who pays for the plan and how much does it cost?
- Plank Four: Timeline –When does the plan happen? How long does it take?

Solvency: Explanation of how this plan will solve the problem in our harms.

Advantage One: Title of the cool stuff that happens too.

- A. The first claim necessary to develop the story of the advantage.*
 - 1. Supporting material (example, analogy, cause, sign, authority)*
 - 2. Possible explanation of the relevance of the sub point to the case (if appropriate)*
- B. The second claim necessary to develop the story of the advantage.*
 - 1. Supporting material (example, analogy, cause, sign, authority)*
 - 2. Possible explanation of the relevance of the sub point to the case (if appropriate)*
- C. Any additional points needed.*
- D. Impact of the advantage post plan.*
